Baby steps grow fast for charity

Brittany Shanahan

STUDENTS from Loyola College have collected "half a garage full" of newborn essentials in a charity drive.

The students, from the college's Chisholm House, collected prams, high chairs, bassinets, clothing and baby formula for the Caroline Chisholm Society, which provides counselling, housing and material aid to struggling parents with children up to the age of six.

Chisholm House head Sal Valentino said the students, with the help of Greensborough's St Mary's Primary School, had conducted the house's biggest drive he had seen.

"We have six houses at our school with each attached to a charity. Ours is Caroline Chisholm Society and the aim is to support them as best we can," Mr Valentino said.

"I have never seen a drive this big before in the three years we have done this. The best way I can describe it is imagine a single garage, half of the garage is full with all the items we have collected."
